

MONDAY EVENING, MAY 25, 1903.

OPPOSITION to President Roosevelt, heretofore latent and concealed, threatens to burst into open activity in the Ohio State convention. No other construction can be placed upon the attitude assumed by Senator Hanna in declaring his objections to a resolution endorsing the President for another trouble, is the old jealously and bitterness of the Hanna and Foraker political feud. Senator Foraker, having learned that Senator Hanna did not intend to permit an endorsement of the President by the convention, promptly seized upon the circumstance to make a bid for the State leadership and to strengthen himself at the expense of his Senatorial colleague. But, notwithstanding this. Senator Hanna's stand appears to be one of opposition to Mr. Roosevelt. He virtually announces the possibility that a year from now the Ohio State convention may not wish to instruct delegates to the national convention to vote for Roosevelt, which necessarily means that some other candidate may then be in the field. Senator Hanna's Ohio friends hope the other candidate may be Senator Hanna but the latter will not encourage this sentiment. Senator Foraker's ambition, in the meantime, is not so much to promote the interests of Mr. Roosevelt, as to make Senator Hanna declare his purposes or to steal the convention from eliminated from politics.

Fatal Ending of Auto Race.

Paris, May 25.—Great public indigna tion has been aroused by the list of fatal accidents which followed in the wake of the first stage of the Paris-Madrid auto race yesterday. The race to Madrid is off, as the Spanish premier, following the example of Premier Combes, has forbidden the contestants to go at racing speed on Spanish soil. Reports of yes terday's accidents continue to come in and while several of those reported dead are still alive, they were so badly injured that they will either die or be left partial cripples for life. L. Porter whose machine exploded was seriously and per-haps fatally injured. Nixon, a chauffeur, was caught under the blazing machine and cremated. Besides Nixon two soldiers and a child were killed by the explosion. The latest complete casualty list places the dead at six, and the injured at six. An explanation for the accident is found in the dust which was raised and the large number of competitors. The dust was so thick, that the chauffeurs for the greater part of the time were unable to see the hedges along the road, much less the other competitors.

Two hundred and forty-eight autos started at minute intervals, and all rushing at top speed through a constantly denser atmosphere made the catastrophe inevitable.

Word was received from Poitiers this afternoon that Marcel Renault whose skull was fractured by his being thrown against a tree, had succumbed to his injuries. He is the seventh victim.

Retaining her self possession, Mrs, Keppel stepped between the men and the door and called a footman with whose help she held the men until the police arrived and placed the men under arrest.

wind, struck Pittsburg, Pa., and vicinity yesterday afternoon, and besides killing one man, did considerable property damage. Milton W. Robinson, a resi-dent of West Pittsburg, drove to Schen-ley Park with a party of friends for an afternoon's enjoyment. When the storm came up Robinson sought shelter from the drenching rain under a big ash ree in Panther Hollow. He had been Peter Martin, aged 73, and Odina there but a moment when lightning Morisett, aged 74, were burned to death struck the tree, literally tearing it to barns at Barre Robinson's four or five friends, who were within 25 feet of him at the time, escaped without even a shock from the years of age, a molder, employed by the Piedmont, W. Va., Machine Works, street car on the McKeesport branch of the Pittsburg Railway Company and himself in the head with a revolver in his room.

The women passengers tried to jump also, but were prevented by some of the coolerheaded among the men, Much damage was done to shade trees, many blown down, and several were being split in twain by lightning. The rain-storm was followed by a hailstorm.

> WITNESS ASSASSINATED. -- Temple Rose, one of the most prominent farmers in the western section of Tazewell county, was waylaid and shot to death near his home, on Busthead Creek, Saturday even-ing. Rose was to have appeared in court at Tazewell today to give testimony against several alleged illicit whisky distillers. He left home about sundown to returning, a search was made by the family late in the night. The body was found in the public road with a load of buckshot in the breast. Death must have been instantaneous. The assassination of Rose has caused great excitement. Suspicion points to a certain individual who has not yet been arrested.
